MAKING GOLD LEAF

In one of New York City's downtown business streets may be seen sticking from one of the upper windows a massive arm and hand, the hand grasping a huge hammer and the whole sign gilded. It is the sign of the gold beaters' establishment, where thousands of the gold sheets are turned out after having been packed by gold.

Gold leaf is packed more by the aid of the breath than by the hands. The operation of transferring a sheet of almost transparent gold leaf from one place to another is so delicate that it is possible to do it only by a light puff of the breath. It takes most girls six weeks to acquire this knack, and some girls are never able to acquire it.

The gold reaches the beaters first in wide bars or nuggets and has to be weighed, melted and made into such wide ribbons before anything else is done. The ribbon is then cut into inch squares and beaten with a hammer wielded by a man. When each leaf has been beaten thin it is transferred to a mold, where it is beaten four times more. The beating is done with a wooden hammer weighing from seven to eighteen pounds, on a sheepskin cushion, which rests on a granite block. The gold used for beating is usually 22 or 23 carats fine. A little alloy of copper or silver is added to make it spread. It would be impossible, the beaters say, to handle perfectly pure gold.

After the gold has been beaten it is handed over to the girls, who lift the unspaced leaf from the mold with a pair of wooden pinches, flatten it out on a sheepskin cushion by gently blowing on it, cut it to a perfect square, replace it between the leaves of the book and flatten it out with the breath.

There are twenty-five leaves in a book, and a skilled girl can pack seventy books in a day, for which she gets from 2 1/2 to 3 cents a book.

CLOUDS OF PIGEONS

What is said by the owners to be the largest pigeon farm in the world is at Los Angeles, Cal. There are coops for more than 100,000 of the birds and every nest is occupied, with numbers of the birds roosting on outbuildings and in temporary nesting places.

The birds eat two tons of wheat each day, says the Technical World, with large quantities of green stuff and other foods of which a regular account is not kept, as it is obtained from surrounding farms in exchange for fertilizer from the pigeon ranch. When the birds are disturbed at their eating they rise from the ground in high white clouds, spotted here and there with patches of blue and rufous coated pigeons. Of late years the colored birds have been gradually weeded out, until now the population of the place is practically all made up of snow white birds.

In the nesting season, when the coops are full of young and eggs, the pigeons stay close around the farm, but at other times of the year they gather in great white clouds over Griffith Park, the largest city park in the world. At feeding time they fly about the three men constantly employed to care for them, settling on their shoulders, heads and arms, even trying to get into the feed sacks, from which the wheat is thrown in great acropuffs.

The product of the farm, squabs, young birds and adults, goes entirely to the large hotels of Los Angeles and surrounding resorts.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A MOTHER?

BY A WINNER
What is home without a mother?
What are all the joys we meet?
When her loving smile no longer
Greets the coming of our feet?
The days seem long, the nights are dreary
And time rolls slowly on;
And, O, how few are childhood's pleasures
When her gentle care is gone!

Things we prize are first to vanish;
Hearts we love, to pass away;
And how soon, 'tis in our childhood,
We behold her turning gray!
Her eyes grow dim, her step is slower,
Her joys of earth are passed;
And sometimes, ere we learn to know her,
She has breathed on earth her last.

Oldest hearts may have their sorrows;
Griefs that quickly die away;
But a mother, lost in childhood,
Grieves the heart from day to day.
We miss her kind, her willing hand,
Her fond and earliest care;
And, O, how dark is life around us!
What is home without her there?

WASTE PAPER HEAVY LOSS

Hearing of processes for the reclamation of waste timber brings to mind the tremendous quantity of paper thrown aside daily as useless. An office of ordinary size produces at least a ton of waste in paper a month, which is disposed of at a price ranging from five to ten dollars.

The buyers of this office paper produce feed it to machines that grind the paper by a sort of hay-press process, and the magic of machinery returns the soiled scraps in pristine whiteness. Waste paper has become so much a matter of course that new offices are built with a paper shed, a contrivance for caring directly for this waste. In some businesses this product amounts to hundreds of tons in a year, and where the amount is large, as in a city printing office, it is gathered every day.

In addition to the paper of commercial and manufacturing concerns there is the constant waste going on in every home, which would aggregate thousands of dollars every year if accounted for in the economies of the country. Possibly, when the Conservation Commission has disposed of its big problems, it will find means to eliminate this source of waste.

New Substitute for Rubber

In a new process for making a substitute for indiarubber, the materials used are animal refuse capable of yielding gelatin, oils, sulphur, chromates and sodium stannate, the addition of the last-named salt being the distinguishing feature of the process.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

The Fall fashions are distinctly novel and mainly new, and what is better, becoming styles have been brought out—two and three-piece suits, in separate coats and even in separate skirts. In dressy costumes of all sorts many new drapery effects have been evolved by the great French fashion designers. In its plainest form the overskirt drapery consists of a close straight piece of the fabric reaching to a variously pleated or shirred half-skirt. In the more extreme effects such as the full draperies at the sides and back, the new washwoman overskirts, the material is draped and gathered very much on the order of the overskirt of twenty-five years ago.

Variety in the New Modes

This Fall no woman need despair. The new styles contain such a great variety of models that it is possible to clothe almost any figure becomingly. For a slender woman the new creases frocks are extremely chic if well made, but it must be remembered that the variation of an inch or two in length of yoke or corsage will make all the difference between a frock that is becoming and one that is the reverse.

The costume consisting of waist and skirt is again in fashion. This never exactly went out of style among sensible people but in the host of princess effects and one-piece frocks, it has seemed almost passe for the past year.

Rough Materials

Wide wale cueveto, heavy ribbed serges, homespuns and other manish materials are among the fabrics used to make the new tailor gowns. Zibelines, camel's hair and rough goods are also extremely smart. Broadcloths and velvets are used for the very dressiest type of visiting gowns and are lavishly braided and trimmed. The salient features of the new tailor made frocks for Fall are the elongated waist line and the snug hip line that is intended to be fitted over the long corset that does much to flatten the hips and make them appear slender.

New Millinery

Felt hats are making their appearance in the New York shops. It is, of course, a little too early to wear them but we all like to know just what novel ideas in the millinery line fashion has to show. Although many charming small hats and turbans are displayed the dominant idea is the large Cavalier shape. Fine silk velvet is often used as a covering for the entire hat with crown drappings of various new effects and materials and novelty bands. With handsome ostrich plume trimmings these hats are the richest looking and most picturesque headgear that was ever evolved.

Turbans and Toques

Large turbans are another distinctly new idea in the millinery world. A charming Paris model is made in a large round shape that entirely covers the head in dark brown velvet, elaborately draped with the folds caught down by velvet covered buttons. It is trimmed rather high on the right side with a full brush of heron's egret feathers.

The new Russian toque is another striking novelty. A model just imported from a famous Paris milliner is made of mustard colored velvet and has a very large high crown with the narrow brim abruptly turned up at the left side.

Drapery Effects

In evening frocks and in fact in dressy gowns of all sorts there is at present a perfect rage for changeable effects and the loveliest of changeable silks and shaded chiffons have been brought out. Black nets and lace are combined most effectively with color for evening wear and old Chantilly silks are now being pulled out of family treasure chests and draped over party frocks and reception gowns.

through the upper Fox River, 105 miles to the Portage Canal, which is 24 miles in length. Thence it passes down the Wisconsin River, reaching the Mississippi near Prairie du Chien.

Professor T. A. Jagger, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is spending the summer in Honolulu, making arrangements for the construction of an observatory at the brink of the Volcano Kilauea for the study of volcanic action. The people of the island were invited to co-operate with the American institution, and have succeeded in raising a large amount of money for the purpose.

The special gold medal of the Royal Geographical Society has been presented to Lieutenant Edward H. Shackleton, the presentation having been made by the Prince of Wales on behalf of the society. Another Antarctic expedition is contemplated by Lieutenant Shackleton at an early date.

In the course of the Coroner's inquest on the fatal explosion of gas in Grange road, Bermondsey, some interesting testimony concerning the resistance of concrete was given by Sir Alexander Binnie and a foreman in the employ of the South Metropolitan Gas Company, says the Builder, of London. It appears that the gas pipe primarily responsible for the explosion was the kind known as a "rider," connecting two parallel mains on each side of the road. Under it was a cavity 6 feet deep by 15 feet wide, caused by the escape from a broken water main. The cavity must have been in existence for a considerable time, for Sir Alexander Binnie found two high-tide marks upon its sides. The most extraordinary circumstance in connection with the affair is that the part of Grange road over the cavity consisted of nothing but a thin layer of concrete covered by granite-setts. This apparently frail support had borne the weight of ordinary traffic and horse-drawn trams without the least indication of failure until fractured by the explosion—thus affording a most striking illustration of the valuable properties possessed by well-made and thoroughly seasoned concrete.

SCIENCE NOTES

The cases in which bear and other bottled goods of this character are sold represent a considerable investment, and when they are sent out there is no assurance that they will ever come back. By knocking out the interior divisions these boxes make excellent garbage and ash receptacles, and to this humble sphere they frequently find their way. This has been overcome recently by the construction of these cases of pressed steel, of which material they are very strong and durable. By making them of metal it is possible to construct them with an open bottom, which renders them unsuited for many purposes to which they have been surreptitiously devoted.

The plan for the new Quebec bridge will not be completed for several months yet, and although the design in many particulars will be the same as that of the old bridge, none of the old material will be used in the new structure. All the girders and other material delivered for the ill-fated bridge will be treated as scrap.

Col. Frank Tonville, a rancher living near Medford, Ore., is said to have produced a deep-rooted vine which brings forth three crops of berries in a season, which result has been obtained by grafting alfalfa roots on the roots of the strawberry vine. Alfalfa roots deeply and produces three to five crops a year without irrigation. It occurred to him that strawberries might do the same if the vine could be made to extend down far enough, so as to receive moisture from the soil throughout the season.

It is not generally known that a waterway between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi now exists across the State of Wisconsin, and recently two steamers of considerable size passed through from the lake to the river. The route extends from Lake Michigan up Fox River, 38 miles, to and across Lake Winnebago, and

FARM NEWS

There is lots of corn in the field, and you can see it in the field.

Don't feed much corn during the hot weather. It is better to feed a little more of the best quality.

Kerosene emulsion is one of the most useful remedies against insects, especially those that suck the sap from the plants. Learn to figure out a balanced ration for your fowls when you can, but most farmers will learn by practice to give the right feed in proper proportions.

Do not use kerosene on the bodies of poultry. It will make the feathers come out and sometimes kill the birds, but use the oil freely on the nests and around the nest boxes.

The feeding value of hay is often lowered when it is stacked out in the open.

A horse trainer says that the average person does not know how to pet a horse. He says they do not pet them in the right place. Rub his eyelids or up between the ears. In petting horses most people slight these nerve centers. They stroke the horse's nose. While a well-behaved horse will accept the nasal caress complacently, he would much prefer that nice, soothing touch applied to the eyelids.

Skim-milk is useful in pig feeding. When the milk is run through a centrifugal separator all of the butter fat, except the slightest trace, is removed, and consequently the pigs receive no fattening element from the skim-milk. It does contain some ash material, which builds up the bony frame work of the pig, and also some protein matter which builds up the muscles of the pig. Whether, however, skim-milk is not a good food by any means, and should not be given to the exclusion of other more concentrated foods.

Sunflowers are grown by farmers and gardeners. The seed makes an excellent feed for poultry and can be easily and profitably produced. The seeds can be sown in rows and the crop cultivated the same as corn. When ripe the seed is threshed out and fed to poultry either whole or ground. If the sunflower heads are thrown into the chicken yard, the birds will thresh the seeds out themselves with no expense to the grower. It is an excellent fattening food and when fed with cracked corn gives good results.

Rape is essentially a hog and sheep pasture. Land should be prepared early by deep plowing and the seed sown about May 1st, either in drills or broadcast. Small lots may be sowed with a hand drill in rows twenty-four or thirty-two inches apart, and cultivated. The method requires about two pounds of seed per acre. Set the drill for turnips. Broadcast sowing requires about four pounds of seed. If sown with a thin seeding of oats, the rape plants will come on after the oats are cut and produce considerable pasture. Rape is also sown with corn at the last cultivation for fall pasture. When the plants are about twelve inches high, they are large enough to be pastured. If they are not pastured too close, they will make a second growth. The use of hedges is recommended. Care should be taken not to pasture when the plants are wet with dew, as pig's ears become chafed and sore, and sheep are likely to blast. One acre of rape will support from twenty to thirty animals for two months.

A good dairy cow is wedge-shaped in two directions. She is wide in the rear and narrow in front. She is narrow on the top of the shoulders and wide between the forelegs. This shape gives room for a large amount of feed and for a big heart, denoting a strong arterial circulation.

It is important that alfalfa be cut early if intended to be fed to hogs. An experiment at the Kansas Experiment Station showed that a ton of early-cut and well-cured alfalfa hay fed with grain, produced 868 pounds of pork, while a ton of late-cut and poorly-cured, fed with grain, produced only 333 pounds. For fattening hogs it is well to feed about one ton of well-cured alfalfa with each 250 bushels of grain.

There are many reasons why calves, chief of which are, they are raw eggs, lime water, castor oil, blood meal is not recommended, and should be hand if a person is raised to do in case of scours is to the supply of milk. This down one-half at first, and gradually increased until the calf is full amount.

The most fruitful source of pigs is dirty sties. The curing is to provide clean, a warm, secluded spot. Give of castor oil to remove oil from bowels and soothe the Many alfalfa mills are in Kansas and other Western States. Kansas plant has a capacity of 100 tons per day and pays $3 for its raw material. Alfalfa used extensively in the State.

Horses do not need a alfalfa hay. Fed with grain or 15 pounds of it is equal to 100 pounds of other hay. As the customers to the alfalfa, it is a rich food, and should be as freely as hay with less

If you intend removing barns see to it that you give in the way of windows, that aids in keeping the wholesome as much as barns ought to have two down spaces in them as the

In buying male birds be sure in selecting the known breeder who may utility fowls. This is many breeders of these points in view of their flocks. On the danger in buying birds has been to highly developed or egg producing lines has been so much emphasis has been reached utility has been ignored.

There is a feeling among several of our business men that the special police employed on Saturday nights, are not using proper judgment in the performance of their duty. We are informed by two of our best merchants, that the colored people who patronize their stores on Saturday nights are not permitted to stop in front of their stores, and on more than one occasion they have been driven away from their business places while looking in their show windows.

It is not the intention of the writer to shield those who attempt to blockade the sidewalks of our town on Saturday nights, but the officers should use proper judgment in handling the crowds; and while it is necessary to keep the passageway clear, it can be done without driving prospective customers from the show windows of our merchants. The following business men will ask the Town Commissioners at their next meeting, to instruct their officers as to the rights of the people who visit our town and spend their money.

Resolved, That we, the undersigned business men of the town of Middletown, Delaware, are opposed to the methods employed by the town police in not allowing the colored people to stay on the streets on Saturday nights; while we believe it necessary to keep a passage clear, we do not think it is right that the police should be stationed on the corners and not allow the people to stand for one minute without ordering them to move on. We also believe it unnecessary to drive them all out of town at 10 P. M.

HOW FLIES SEEK FOOD

"Common opinion," says E. T. Brewster, writing on the house fly in McClure's for September, "has it that the fly mediates profoundly on the conduct of life, knows what he wants and why he wants it, and deliberately joins the assembly around the top of the kitchen screen door to wait for the chance to dodge in when the cook comes out."

"As a matter of fact, the fly is no such rational thinker. He has one supreme motive in life, and that is—to move toward the strongest smell. He enters the house because there are more smells inside than out, and, once in, he frequents the kitchen because there are more smells there than in the parlor. The fly does not find its food by sight, but by odor only. In fact, the fly's sight is extremely poor; for nature has never solved the optical problem of making a small eye see as clearly as a large one. The customary swarm of flies around the kitchen door means only that the kitchen windows are open at the bottom, and since the top of the door is the highest opening in the room, that, rather than one of the windows, is carrying the out-draft and the smell of yesterday's soup. The moral is, adjust the ventilation so that the out-draft shall be through a screened window. No fly will ever see a door open and deliberately fly in."

"For the same reason, all unused chimneys connected with fireplaces ought to be screened just as carefully as the windows. In the cool weather of early fall when the flies are worst, the chimney-draft is usually outward. The fly never hunts for an opening to come in by; but he does head upstream to an air current which bears the odor of most human foods. Therefore, when the air of a home goes out of a chimney the fly comes in."

The Imperial Double Disc Harrow

The Imperial Double Disc Harrow is just what its name indicates—two harrows combined in one, for the purpose of saving time and labor in tilling the soil. Its capacity is twice that of any other form of Disc Harrow, for it works the ground twice at one operation. One man and four horses operate the largest size (28 disc), doing as much work as could be done with two ordinary harrows employing two men and six or eight horses. Moreover the work is more thoroughly done, for the second harrowing follows immediately after the first, before the freshly cut ground has had time to dry out or become hard.

The forward pair of gangs cut the ground and throw it outward. The rear gangs cut it again and throw it back, leaving the surface finely pulverized and perfectly level. The two pairs of gangs are connected by a jointed frame which causes the rear gangs to follow the front gangs in turning, moving over the same ground in rounding a corner. This adds much to the ease of operation, especially in turning round at the end of the field.

The Imperial Double Disc not only tines and reduces the soil in a very thorough manner, but it also leaves the surface even and level in every part of the field. No ridges are thrown up at the turning points, that objection being overcome by the flexible frame. The ground is as effectively pulverized and leveled there as it is anywhere else. For preparing corn stubble ground without plowing, for cutting up sod, for general harrowing, or in fact for any work a Disc Harrow can do, the Imperial Double Disc has no equal. Lots of them in use in this section and every user more than pleased.

The editor of THE TRANSCRIPT has a warm place in his heart for the friends who bring or send in news items. It is the desire of this paper to give all the news all the time and those who lend us their assistance to that end have our unbounded gratitude.

Try and make a live, enterprising place out of your home town, and when working for its institutions or speaking of the town and country remember you are accomplishing all the more for yourself. Don't be foolish enough to idle away valuable time predicting failures and thereby decreasing the value of your property.

Unclaimed Letters—The following list of letters remain unclaimed in the post office for the week ending August 26th: Mrs. Mary O. Doley, Augusta Gibbons, Wm. H. Belton (Dead Letter) Jas. H. Brown (Dead Letter) Mr. W. J. Lindall Mr. Noah Stiney, Mr. Charles Feibel, Mr. Thomas, Mr. W. Watson.

Rural mail carriers have been instructed to encourage as far as possible the use among farmers of the stamp book. These books contain twelve cent stamps and they sell for 25 cents each, remain intact to an indefinite time, and their use would save the carriers much annoyance in making change when a farmer wishes to pay a stamp.

There are two little words, "very simple" in themselves, that introduce untold trouble in the world and are responsible for more gossip, scandal and harm than any two words in the English language. These two words are nothing more than, "They say." They have done more to ruin the reputations than all other things. If you never quote what "they say" you may be quite certain you are not a gossip.

How about your stock of envelopes, letter heads, shipping tags, statements, business cards, order blanks, receipt books, due bills, circulars, postal cards and special blanks required in your business? If you have need for any of these, why not send your order to THE TRANSCRIPT office where it will receive prompt and careful attention, and where the work is guaranteed to give satisfaction. Estimates cheerfully furnished. Let us hear from you.

Some boys do not earn $20 a year, yet they can afford to smoke cigarettes and to use tobacco in other forms. Little boys should think it over seriously before commencing to use tobacco. Boys who do not use the weed or lot continually on the streets are much better models to follow. No boy should wish to pattern after a profane, foul mouthed, worthless street loafer.

Governor Pennell has made the following appointments: Congressman William H. Heald, delegate to the Lakes and Gulf Deep Water Convention at New Orleans, from October 20 to 30; Dr. William Marshall, of Milford, and Dr. William Marshall, of Lewes, delegates to the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States in Washington, October 5, 6 and 7.

Owing to the demand for the coins the local banks have about exhausted the supply of the Lincoln pennies recently received. The Lincoln penny is unique in that it is the first United States coin ever put into circulation bearing the portrait of a citizen, living or dead. When the country in general is supplied from the Philadelphia mint, which is the only mint in the country manufacturing the coin, it is believed it will be necessary to strike off about 100,000,000.

Perfect weather Wednesday night gave all who wished to see it a view of the eclipse or occultation of the planet of Mars by the moon. The eclipse was visible for nearly an hour, and was plain from about 8.45 to within a few minutes before 10 o'clock. When the moon rose, Mars was nearly at its edge. The planet could be readily distinguished because of its great brilliancy and reddish hue. It is the brightest star in the heavens at this time and in contrast to the silvery lustre of the moon, could be easily discerned. The eclipse of Mars by the moon is declared by the astronomers to be a most unusual phenomenon.

The Middletown Public Schools will reopen for the fall and winter term on Monday, September 13th, one week from next Monday.

Monday next being Labor Day, both of our banks will be closed. Notes coming due on that day, will have to be attended to today.

The battleship Delaware, the biggest of the American dreadnaughts afloat and which, when commissioned, will be one of the most powerful warships in the world will be ready for her trials in October.

Postmasters are being notified by the Postoffice Department at Washington that the new issue of postage stamps to commemorate the discovery of the Hudson River by Henry Hudson and the navigation on its waters by Robert Fulton, will be ready for distribution about September 25th.

The war against the fly still continues, but it will have to be pursued more vigorously before extermination is reached. The breeding places of the pest need looking after, and the owners of such should be made to observe the necessary laws in this regard. The keeping of open garbage barrels about the household is largely responsible for many of the flies, and much of the illness of the neighborhood could be avoided by their abolition.

Middletown was well represented at the New Castle County Fair, Wilmington this week, quite a large delegation of our people attending each day. Besides Middletown horses were much in evidence in the speed contests and in the honors for breeding, etc. Mr. N. J. Williams alone had a string of seven and brought home a number of "blue ribbons." Mr. Williams is a good judge of horse flesh, and has a number of fine-bred animals in his stables.

Mr. Joseph C. Jolly, Clerk of the Orphans Court, appeared before the Levy Court Tuesday in the interests of a movement to have the St. Anne road now being built in Appoquinimink hundred, extended to the town limits of Middletown. Mr. Jolly explained that the extension over the road now being built would be about 2,000 feet, to bring it to the limits of Middletown and that he thought in case the extension is not made now it never will be made. The court agreed to come to Middletown and look the situation over next Thursday.

THE GUNNING SEASON

The season for shooting reed and rail-birds in this State opened Wednesday and until February 1st it will be lawful to hunt and shoot these birds. As a matter of fact, however, the season will be much shorter than that, as these birds will be gone within a few weeks. From present indications they are very timid and for a few days will probably be reached to reach except where they are surprised, but if the bombardment is not too extensive they will probably recover from the shock and be plentiful again. The reeds are in excellent condition and make splendid feeding grounds. The open seasons for different kinds of game in Delaware are as follows:

Reedbird—Season begins September 1st and ends February 1st.

Railbird—Season begins September 1st and ends February 1st.

Wild goose—Season begins October 1st and ends April 15th.

Swan—Season begins October 1st and ends April 15th.

Wild duck—Season begins October 1st and ends April 15th.

Squirrels—Season begins in New Castle and Kent counties on November 15th and ends December 31st.

Quail—Season begins November 15th and ends December 31st.

Partridge—Season begins November 15th and ends December 31st.

Pheasant—Season begins November 15th and ends December 31st.

Rabbit—Season begins November 15th and ends December 31st.

A PROMOTER OF TRADE

Advertising seems to be an art yet to be discovered by some people. That is, the practical part of it. A constant stream of water from one or more fire engines will soon extinguish or get under control a very large fire, while a few buckets of water, dashed on here and there, have little or no effect. The modern fire department is practical, and has outgrown the bucket system; and so with modern advertising—plenty of it, used in a practical, common sense and judicious manner, pays.

If you want to catch a certain kind of fish you use a certain kind of bait; not all fish bite at all kinds of bait. Not all people respond to every advertisement. The newspaper is a medium indispensable to the majority of advertisers, because of its wide and repeating circulation. As a promoter of trade and profit newspaper advertising is no longer an open question; that is when done in a practical and intelligent manner, and pays because of its effectiveness and cheapness.

DELAWARE TRAIN CHANGE

Important changes in the schedule of the Delaware Railroad will go into effect on Monday. Passenger trains No. 631 and 632 will be added to the run between Georgetown and Rehoboth. No. 631 will leave Georgetown at 6.51 P. M., arriving at Rehoboth at 7.31. No. 632 will leave Rehoboth at 1.30 o'clock P. M., arriving at Georgetown at 2.10. Passenger trains Nos. 532, 545, 536 and 539 between Harrington and Rehoboth will be withdrawn, as will the second class passenger train No. 537 between Harrington and Georgetown. Train No. 31 will leave Wilmington at 2.53 P. M., instead of 2.38, stopping at Wyoming. This train will also be an "F. V." train. On the 3.44 train there will be a Pullman car through to Pocomoke City.

OYSTER SEASON OPENS

The oyster season opened on Wednesday and the toothsome bivalves will again make their appearance. According to reports from the oyster beds, the conditions for a good season have been favorable. The protracted dry weather of the past few weeks is said to have had a beneficial effect, bringing the salt water well up into the streams where the oysters are found. Many boats have gone to the oyster grounds to get ready for the work, and the carrying boats are also on hand ready to take the oysters to market as soon as they are taken from the water.

OBITUARY

JOHN W. DENNY

The many friends of John W. Denny were shocked last Sunday evening when informed of his death, which occurred at 7.15 o'clock, at his home on North Broad street. Only his immediate family and a few personal friends were aware of his critical illness, and his sudden death came as a great surprise. He had been confined to his room for about two weeks suffering with Bright's disease and other complications which resulted in his death. Deceased was aged 63 years.

Mr. Denny was one of the most widely known men in lower New Castle County, and at the time of his death was tax collector for St. Georges Hundred. He was a Republican, and took an active part in political affairs locally. Adhering to the faith of his father, he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church early in life, and through all the sorrows that he met in the way, his faith in God never wavered, and to-day, the anxious leaves are falling upon another grave that hides from our sight all that is mortal of this true and faithful man.

He was the son of the late Benjamin Denny, and was born in Appoquinimink Hundred, and had spent his entire life in this section. About 18 months ago he lost his wife, who was the daughter of the late John Naudain. Deceased leaves four daughters, two sons and a large circle of friends to mourn his death.

Funeral services

Funeral services were held at his late residence on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Revs. V. C. Collins and W. H. Hutchins having charge, and interment was made in Immanuel Cemetery, near Townsend.

Cause Appointments

Ex-Senator L. H. Ball, who has been appointed census supervisor for Delaware, will name an assistant in each county, in addition to appointing a large number of enumerators. It was stated that the taking of the census will not begin until next April. The ex-Senator has received a large number of applications for positions, which pay anywhere from $20 to $30 a week.

CASH-DOWN TOWN

Village Where All Pay-As-They-Go Is Bustled Burg on Eastern shore. FARMINGTON, Md.—If you have the price you will be glad to save; if you haven't you would do better by going to the next town.

This is the way the merchants of Federalburg talk, and the way they do business—on a strictly cash basis—and which it comes to making "change" there is hardly a business house in the town that cannot always manage anything from a five-cent piece to a $1,000 certificate. Among the stores in this town it is money or its equivalent, or the goods remain much rather become attached to their possessor than to be attached by the Sheriff.

Federalburg, situated in the extreme southeastern corner of Caroline County, on the Cambridge and Seaford branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is one of the most progressive towns anywhere on the Eastern Shore, and one of the very few towns in the United States that set strictly for cash. This the people can pay because everybody works here, even to "father."

Next to Seaboard, Federalburg is the busiest little town on the lower Peninsula. In commercial growth within the past 10 years has been rapid, and as a manufacturing town it stands second only to Salisbury. There are four mills and feed mills and mills of every kind on the Eastern Shore, but there is no town that can boast of the modern, thoroughly up-to-date flour and feed mill like that at Federalburg. Federalburg's great mills and their special brands of wheat and buckwheat flour are likely to make the town famous. There are various other manufacturing industries there, such as crabs and barrel factories, shoe and barrel factories, two shirt factories and other smaller factories and mills, beside a big creamery.

Federalburg's progress is easily accounted for. Its captains of industry and producers pull together. There is no friction between them, and they are side by side and hand in hand in everything that tends to the advancement of the town and its material welfare.

Everybody is out of debt and prosperous in Federalburg. If they work they get the cash for it and if they buy anything they pay the cash for it. The merchant discount all their bills and give their customers the benefit. The people here, in a measure, believe in the co-operative plan of living and doing things—"the you work for me and I'll work for you" system—and it has been successful.

As a town doing business on a strictly cash basis, Federalburg is in the lead. The cash and co-operative systems have been its salvation. The two systems combined have made it what it is to-day. The town also claims to be the only one in the country whose inhabitants can go before the "Squire" and say "We owe no man" and it all "come about," so the merchants say, by swearing allegiance to the cash system. So strongly, indeed, is the town wedded to this system that, were the Governor of the State to come here and call for a plug of tobacco without plunking down the money it is doubtful if he would get it.

The motto of the town is "No Trust; No Bust," and it is living up to it to the letter.

TARRYING WITH THE TIDE

When by reason of his uncle's will Garry Elliott came into possession of an eighty-acre farm, his first impulse was to dispose of his inheritance; but when a visit showed it to be situated on the banks of a river full of fish and bordered by woods populated with quail and partridge, he rented the farm to a worthy couple and arranged to visit them twice annually for hunting and fishing expeditions.

His first season he enjoyed with all the zest of a man who loves out-of-doors. His second visit was not paid from sporting desire, but from a great need for a place to sulk and brood. Garry called his feeling a longing solitude. He had been one of many suitors for the hand of Margaret Sibley, daughter of Sibley, who was better known by the public as the Copper King; but when he told her of his love she looked bored and replied: "Et tu, Brute? Mayn't I keep one friend, then?"

He walked through the woods along the river's shore without gun and without rod. Finding no place in the haunts of nature, he fled from his farm again and tried his club. The club was worse than the farm. In disgust he joined a party of men going to Alaska for a hunt. He remained in the far Northwest for six months and returned in blossom time. The call of the open country was urgent, despite his sojourn in the wilderness—or perhaps because of it. He went directly to the farm.

We have new neighbors on the ten-acre strip, vouchsafed his tenant, Mrs. Dailey.

Have they built a house in place of the old shack?

No; they've fixed up things a bit, though, and built on a screened porch. There is a boy who has to sleep out.

Who are they? asked Garry carelessly.

Their names are Sibley. He winced at the sound of the name.

Mr. Sibley used to be a millionaire, but he lost everything speculating, continued his garrulous tenant. He don't come down very often. His daughter stays all the time and takes care of her young brother. Then there is an elderly woman who does the work. She was the boy's nurse when he was a baby. They keep a cow and some chickens, but they don't know how to garden. I'm going to take them down things from here this summer if you don't mind.

Garry's head and heart were in a whirl at this wonderful intelligence. Margaret, his neighbor—and poor! he had left her in anger, but he must be a friend now, as she had asked him to be then. Early the next morning he crossed his meadow land to the little ten-acre strip. Harold Sibley, a delicate lad of fourteen, came forward in delighted recognition. How do you do, Mr. Elliott? I'm awfully glad to see you. Come into our little summer house. Margaret will be in soon.

Garry followed the boy into the tiny house. The sitting room, he noted at a glance, held a few furnishings that Margaret had brought with her. Two or three rugs, a few of her favorite books, a luxurious easy chair and couch. Come on, urged Harold, and see the rest of the playhouse, as Margaret calls it.

He followed the lad into the tiny dining room and kitchen, where old Abbie was washing dishes.

We have two little bedrooms beyond, and that is all, laughed Harold, except my outdoor room. Here comes Margaret!

She came in flushed and triumphant with a basket of eggs, which she nearly dropped at sight of Elliott. Her greeting was cordial and unembarrassed, however.

I did not know you had returned from Alaska, she said.

Only returned last night and learned you were my neighbor. Mrs. Dailey told me you owned their farm.

I came to hear all about it, Margaret, he said, his heart thrilling as of old at the sight of her fair face and the glad sound of her voice.

There is not much to tell, she said, thoughtfully. Papa's possessions were in copper, and the stocks all stopped dividends and things became complicated. He sold the house. In the midst of his troubles came Harold's ill health. Dr. Fow said he must live out of doors and have all the good milk and fresh eggs he could eat. Papa said that reminded him he owned a farm and then he laughed and told us about coming across a deed to this little piece of land. He doesn't remember how he ever came to buy it. From the sale of our household effects, I reserved these few things. I had $100 from last allowance. I bought a cow and some chickens and we live here very cozily. Abbie was our salvation. She would come without wages. But our friend in need has been Mrs. Dailey. She never comes empty handed, and once or twice when Harold has been ill, she was doctor and nurse combined.

Harold registered a secret vow that Mrs. Dailey should be pensioned for life.

Margaret, he said earnestly, when last we met you offered me your friendship, which I refused. May I offer you mine, now, and will you be generous enough to accept?

Indeed I will, was the hearty response. My friends are few, and I will appreciate them the more.

It hurts me more than I can tell you to think of you living like this! It is brave and noble, and entirely like you, to accept it so cheerfully.

No, she protested. We are not in want, and I truly enjoy this simple life. I am happy every time I look at Harold. He is so interested in the garden and farming. When are you going to the city?

To-morrow and I shall be down here every week-end, and I expect to spend much time here this summer, fishing.

Oh, she replied, looking somewhat surprised. I didn't know you came here so often.

I love the country. That is why I did not sell the farm.

When he was taking leave, he said falteringly: We have quantities of things at the farm that we can't use. If you will only let me send them to you—

She laughed at his evident embarrassment.

I have no false pride, Garry, if you have more than you can use, we shall be glad to take whatever you send.

He went to the city happy in the thought that she was going to be sensible and let him help her. Saturday he returned laden with fruit, confections, flowers, books and magazines.

Mrs. Dailey's young nephew is coming to visit her, so I bought a pony and cart, he announced. He can't drive, though, so if you don't mind, I'll leave them here in your shed and Harold can keep the pony exercised.

Yes, she laughed. And I presume you will think it another favor if we accept oats and hay.

The next Sunday brought Mr. Sibley, and Garry dined at the little house.

You certainly live well for country people, Margaret, laughed her father. You must have wonderful crops.

We get our supplies from Garry's farm. This week we have had four chickens, one bushel potatoes, bacon, six pies, five rolls of butter, three loaves of cake, one jar cookies, one squash, one bag flour—

Hold on! cried Garry in consternation, dreading Sibley's sensitiveness. He was relieved to hear the Copper King's laugh and comment.

Good for you, Elliott! You are the kind of a neighbor to cultivate. I see there is no danger of my children starving.

The summer proved to be the happiest Garry had ever known. He brought down his saddle horses and touring car and Margaret learned to enjoy his fishing excursions with him.

One night in early autumn Garry was unusually silent. Finally he gathered his courage and spoke:

Margaret, in a few weeks the weather will not permit you to live comfortably in this little shack.

I know it, she said, wistfully. It would not be wise on Harold's account.

Dear, he said, his voice trembling, will you not let me offer you a home? I can't give you one like the home you lost, but Margaret, if you will only come to me, I can make you, your father and Harold so comfortable. Do you care for me more than you did?

Garry, she answered, turning to him, her eyes filling with tears, I didn't know you then. While we were so rich I was surrounded by people who all seemed selfish and scheming and grasping. I liked you, but I thought all men were alike. I never dreamed that any man could be as you have proved. Margaret, the little I have done for you is nothing. I love you with all my soul. Will you be my wife and let me try to win your love.

I love you now, Garry, she replied gently.

He was too wildly happy to propose and practical plans that night, but the next day he was eager to arrange for the future.

First of all, Garry, she said, smiling, you must understand that papa will probably soon be richer than he was before.

She laughed at his look of consternation and incredulity.

He held fast to all those stocks you know. That is why economized and lived here, so that he would have to sell none of them.

They are going up now and some of them are resuming dividends. He sold the house and things to buy more shares while the price was low. So our fortunes were recuperating while we were living on your bounty.

Why didn't you tell me, Margaret?

You see we weren't at all sure stocks would come up, and it seemed natural some way to accept your plenty. I would really have accepted it if we had been paupers, but papa would not have permitted it if he hadn't felt sure that he could afford to accept it.

I am glad, said Garry, thoughtfully, that I met you at the ebb of your fortunes.

So am I, for in no other way could I have learned, Garry, what a dear you are!
